COVID-19 PRIVACY FAQS: ANSWERING THE QUESTIONS YOU'VE BEEN WONDERING ABOUT

Privacy issues have suddenly been appearing in the news, as we all grapple with COVID-19. What information can be disclosed about someone who is sick? What technology can we use to contain the spread? Can videoconferencing programs be used to help people work remotely? Privacy Lawyer Julie Facchin gives short answers to each of these questions, from a privacy law perspective, in this blog post.
