DAVID L. CAYLEY, ASSOCIATE COUNSEL

David is a member of the firm's Litigation and Dispute Resolution Group. He assists companies and individuals with a broad range of commercial litigation matters, including contract disputes, property disputes, shareholder disputes, professional negligence claims, and defamation claims. David has particular expertise with complex disputes involving joint ownership of real property.

David often works with clients in the early stages of disputes to assess claims and defenses and mitigate risks. He frequently advises on collapsing and collapsed transactions and on disputes arising from the breakdown of business relationships. David is often able to resolve disputes by negotiation, but where that is not possible he advocates fiercely, fearlessly, but fairly on behalf of his clients. He has conducted numerous trials and summary trials, appearing before all levels of courts in British Columbia including the Court of Appeal. He has also been involved in arbitrations and mediations.

When not helping clients, David enjoys stand-up comedy, listening to jazz LPs, and spending time with family and friends.
