DAVID HAY, VANCOUVER'S BIKE LAWYER, QUOTED ON OPENFILE

As reported by Meghan Mast for openfile.ca:

On March 10th the CBC reported that city councillor Geoff Meggs was being sued by a motorist with whom he had been in a collision while riding his bike in 2010. The Mercedes sustained $5,000 of damage, while Meggs was hospitalized with damaged vertebrae.

Meggs has since discovered that his homeowner's insurance will cover the cost, but his experience raises an important question - how do cyclists financially protect themselves against ICBC claims?

Richards Buell Sutton's bike lawyer David Hay comments on this topic for the article.
